

Organizing Political Parties

Representation, Participation, and Power

Edited by Susan E. Scarrow, Paul D. Webb, and Thomas Poguntke

- Provides a comparative study of representation and political participation in contemporary democracies
- Provides analysis based on a unique dataset covering politics in 19 democracies and 122 political parties
- Presents original data and new measures for studying party organization and its impact on political representation and participation
- Features contributions from leading scholars in the field

This comparative politics volume presents the first findings of a novel cross-national effort to assess the current state of political parties' internal rules and organizational resources. It also provides a comprehensive overview of the state of party organization in nineteen contemporary democracies. Using a unique new data collection, the book's chapters test propositions about the origins and implications of parties' organizational variations.
